

The whole reason I moved to America was to foster and be challenged in a competitive environment by competition. If I am not a success, I will not be rewarded, conversely if I am able to rise above competition, my efforts will be compensated.

Limiting advancement by procedures and regulations only slows progress and stifles the foundation of what makes this country great. Let the market decide what is fair and just. Intelligent people have the capacity to determine what is "right" to listen to. I am well aware of and support the content of XM radio's programming which is why I gladly pay for the service. If free radio were to provide me with any value whatsoever, I would support the media purchasing sponsors. As evidence, I support KCRW/NPR even though it resides on free airwaves. I strongly support the recommendation to reject NAB's petition and any further FCC regulation on XM.
